History of the City of Cass Lake

The City of Cass Lake has a rich and interesting history. Native people had been living in the area for centuries before white settlers arrived. It is unknown when non-native settlers first arrived, but they were believed to have been fur traders and missionaries. The first trading post is believed to have been established prior to 1760, by a Canadian businessman.

In 1898, the Great Northern Railway was built through the northern section of Minnesota. Due to a series of changes in the right-of-way of the railroad, Cass Lake became an important and more densely populated settlement. Logging and sawmill operations became the backbone of the Cass Lake economy in the late 1800's.

Cass Lake Museum and Lyle's Logging Camp

Experience some of Cass Lake's past in the historically accurate Lyle's Logging Camp. Replicas of equipment once used by loggers are on display and each building is furnished just as it was in the early days. The museum's six buildings were built virtually single-handed by retired forester Lyle Chisholm. Adjacent to Lyle's Logging Camp is the Cass Lake Museum, formerly a railroad depot and one of the few remaining original Soo Line buildings in Minnesota.

Heritage & History

Leech Lake Band of Ojibwe

The Ojibwe Indians, later named Chippewa by the US Federal government, arrived in what is now Minnesota in the early 1700's. At the time of the white man's arrival into Minnesota, the Chippewa occupied over half of the state. Most of the occupied Indian lands in Minnesota were ceded to the Federal government in 1807 and through a series of legislative acts; several Indian Reservations were "reserved" for Native Americans. The Leech Lake Reservation is one of six reservations affiliated with the federally recognized Minnesota Chippewa Tribe; the fourth largest Tribe in the nation.
